

THE GUNS THAT MUST GUARD NEW YORK IF THE NAVY FAILS

Map showing the part played by Fort Wright in the defence of New York city.

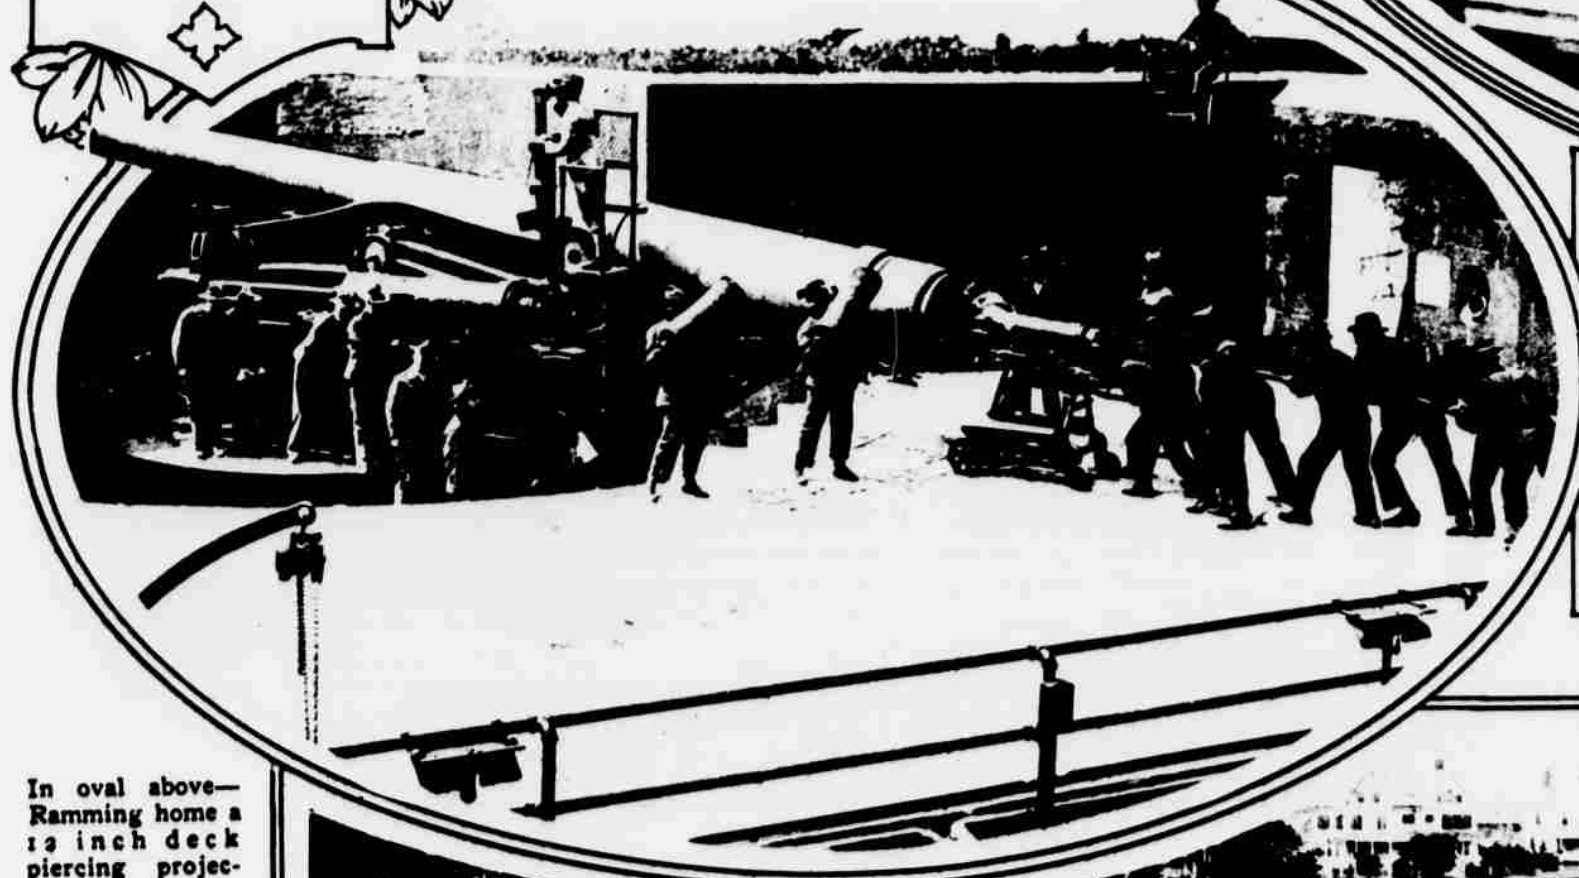

The thundering bark of a big seacoast war dog at Fort Wright, on Fisher's Island, at eastern entrance of Long Island Sound.

A crouching 12 inch gun and a reserve of shells.

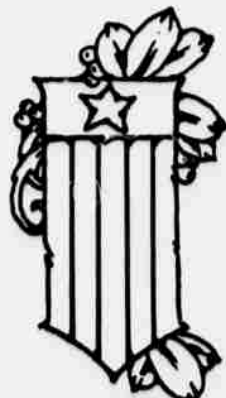

A 12 inch army rifle recoiling to the loading position after discharge.

Range finding and "spotting" for the hidden gunners.

In oval above—Ramming home a 12 inch deck piercing projectile.

In panel at right—The men behind the guns at Fort Wright. Seacoast artillerymen paraded as infantry.
